

PREVIEW 1

Carefully examine the transparency of the Canadian forest. Imagine you have suddenly been placed in this environment, and you must survive there for a year. In the space below, describe the shelter you would build, the clothing you would make to protect yourself from the elements, and the tools you would create to acquire food. Tell why you designed the items the way you did. Mention the natural resources you would use.

READING NOTES 1

1. Examine the artifacts on each placard.
2. Determine the cultural region from which they came.
3. Write the placard letter in the appropriate box.
4. Fill in three environmental features of the region that the artifacts reveal.
5. Read the corresponding section in your book.
6. Write a four-sentence journal entry for that region. In your entry, mention and underline the three artifacts and the three environmental features.

PROCESSING 1

Create an annotated diagram showing the climate, land, and adaptations made by the Native Americans in one cultural region. In your diagram, use words and pictures to describe the land, climate, and adaptations of the Native Americans. A completed diagram for the Northwest Coast region might look like this:

NORTHWEST COAST

Land: Heavily forested, near the sea

Climate: Mild

Adaptations:

- Harpoon for seal hunting
- Bark capes made from cedar trees
- Plank houses made from cedar trees
