June 12, 2009

Today is the 173rd day of first grade.

Can you believe it? There are only 7 days left.

I hope you are all planning to join us at our 1J Poetry Recital. The children each have a poem to read or recite to the audience. If a Hunnewell sibling is interested in attending, please arrange permission from his/her teacher. Don't forget your cameras!

We are moving into our final math unit, Blocks and Boxes. I hope you found the Student Math Handbook helpful as your child worked through first grade math. If you have not yet returned your book to me, please do so as soon as possible.

Drumlin Farm was a perfect culmination of our first grade study of birds. The children saw a screech owl, chicks and chickens, a turkey vulture, and red tailed hawk, to name a few. Many children expressed interest in visiting the farm with their families, so you may want to put the farm down on your summer fun list. Thanks to Donna Wargo for chaperoning for us.
