Welcome Back to School!

Monday I enjoyed meeting many of you at Open House. I am looking forward to getting to know your children and spending the 2009–2010 school year together.

Becoming an independent learner is invaluable and essential and I am committed to helping your child develop and strengthen their learning skills. I hope that you too take your child's education seriously and will commit to helping them by having them read to you each night and completing any assignments sent home.

A Look at This Week

Since "Practice Makes Perfect" and in order for all students to have the best learning environment provided to them, we work on our classroom rules, expectations, routines, and procedures.

This week we will begin working in our math series. EveryDay Math is the new series our district adopted last year. Many of the third graders worked with this series in second grade and we will build and expand on the skills learned last year. Remember to look for the Home Link pages that will be sent home as homework a few times each week.
